

Summer Study Online Programs 2023 Learning Objectives:

Program 1: Longing for Eros: Love, Loss and Relationship

Monday, July 10, The Black and White of Relationships, John A. Desteian, JD, LP

TBA

Tuesday, July 11, Love, Eros, & Emptiness in the 21st Century: The Mandala Speaks, Don L. Troyer, MD

Participants will be able to:

Describe the roots of the crisis of sterility in modern culture resulting in skepticism and materialism.

Articulate understandings of the impact of Eros on human consciousness.

Discuss the mandala's significance as a medium for transmission of archetypal "affect-images."

Wednesday, July 12, Wrestling with Eros: The Lost Myth of Anteros, Craig E. Stephenson, PhD, LP

Participants will be able to:

Describe amplification as part of a Jungian interpretation of psychic material.

Explain myth as a metaphor for the working of an archetype.

Demonstrate how mythological motifs can be misused as labels for psychic behavior, when they are dynamic symbols that are culturally conditioned and need to be historically contextualized.

Thursday, July 13, Tragic Love, Julie Bondanza, PhD

TBA

Friday, July 14, Psychopathy and the Power of Eros, Eve Maram, PsyD

Participants will be able to:

Outline a graded definition of psychopathy

State at least 3 symptoms of psychopathy from depth psychology

Explain how eros holds the potential for healing psychopathy

Program 2: Identity, Alienation and Exile

Monday, July 17, Who am I Really? The 'As-If' Personality and Imposter Syndrome, Susan E. Schwartz, PhD

Participants will be able to:

Identify aspects of the 'as-if' personality according to the schema of Jungian analytical psychology

Summarize Jungian therapeutic/analytical work with this personality type

Outline analytical defenses like psychic retreat, false self, and 'as-if' for expanding the personality

Tuesday, July 18, An I and Self-Othering, Sylvester Wojtkowski, PhD

Participants will be able to:

Summarize the dynamic relationship between ego and other parts of psyche.

Engage and discuss psychological subjectivity.

Assess ego attitudes and recognize the fluidity of different I's.

Explore and critique the relation between self and other.

Wednesday, July 19, Weaving and Unravelling Our Shrouds: Encountering Exile as a Complex in Psyche and Embracing Our Jouissance as a Path towards Source, David Solem, LCSW, MAPC, MA

Participants will be able to:

Explain how an analytic way of working with complexes can be integrated with postmodern and Queer understandings of working with individual and cultural narrative in clinical work.

Describe how an exile complex relates to the religious function of the psyche, a concept that is not only integral to Analytical Psychology but is also central to emergent material in every analytic session.

Apply classical Jungian theory to an understanding of current cultural complexes and how these cultural complexes intersect with individual suffering and potential individuation in a clinical setting.

Demonstrate a basic working knowledge of aspects of Queer Theory and demonstrate a beginning ability to apply ideas from Queer Theory towards an emergent methodology of analytical attitude.

Thursday, July 20, Immigration Experiences: Looking at Mysteries, Trauma, and the Uncanny, Robert Tyminski, DMH

Participants will be able to:

Describe the main psychological factors of intergenerational trauma;

List three characteristics of the uncanny and how it can appear in human interactions;

Explain with two examples how narrative gaps in immigrants stories might happen;

Cite two ways in which a myth like the Aeneid relates to immigration.

Friday, July 21, Developmental Trauma and the Alienated Ego, Julie Bondanza, PhD
